Why All the Bridges in Sturgeon Bay?

HINT: Canal!

The Sturgeon Bay Ship Canal was dug by a private group headed by then-president of Chicago and North Western Railway, William B. Ogden, between July 8, 1872 and the late fall of 1881. Although smaller craft began using the canal in 1880, it was not open for large-scale watercraft until 1890.

The cost of completing the 1.3-mile cut in 1881 was $291,462.

In 1893, the Ogden private investors group sold all interest in the canal to the United States government. Since that time, the canal has been maintained by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The seven-mile long canal was created in part by dredging Sturgeon Bay and the balance by digging the last 1.3 miles. This combined waterway allows ships to sail between Lake Michigan and the Bay of Green Bay without traversing the dangerous Porte des Morts (Death's Door) strait.

The digging of the Canal is undoubtedly one of the most important events in the history of the Door Peninsula and the city of Sturgeon Bay. The brainchild of Joseph Harris, Sr., the historic Ship Canal has shaped the economy and personality of the region since its completion in the 1880s. In addition to economic growth, the Canal made an indelible mark on maritime history in that it spawned lighthouses, lifesaving stations and Sturgeon Bay's remarkable shipbuilding heritage.

Sturgeon Bay Bridge

Sturgeon Bay Bridge:

Built in 1931 and added to the National Register of Historic Places in 2008, the Sturgeon Bay (Michigan Street) Bridge is the only overhead truss, Scherzer-type, double-leaf, rolling-lift Bascule Bridge that remains in Wisconsin. It has experienced little change since it was constructed in 1931, and remains an excellent example of its type. The bridge maintains its segmental girder, which permits its movement, as well as its Warren and Parker through-trusses that were incorporated to help withstand the sweeping winds of Sturgeon Bay. Additionally, the bridge design was provided by the prominent Chicago firm of Keller & Harrington, which was started by Charles Heller and Howard Parsons Harrington. Both Keller and Harrington had gained bascule and rolling-lift expertise while they were employed with the Charles Scherzer Rolling Lift Bridge Company of Chicago. The firm designed several prominent and impressive bridges across the country. The Sturgeon Bay Bridge is a significant representation of their engineering work.

Bayview Bridge

Paul Haan

Maple-Oregon Street Bridge:

This 310-foot long double-leaf rolling lift bascule span bridge over the Sturgeon Bay ship canal was built in 2008 at a length of 1,057 feet. With a lift opening of 200 feet, the Maple-Oregon Bridge is one of the longest draws of any lift bridge in Wisconsin. Aesthetic features such as pedestrian overlooks and architectural light fixtures on the superstructure enhance the bridge's visual appeal for travelers by road and across the bay. Separated from the Michigan Street Bridge by just over 700 feet, the large freighters that utilize the Ship Canal do not clear the first bridge before entering the draw of the second bridge, requiring both bridges to be drawn at the same time - - quite a sight to see!

Bayview Bridge:

The Bayview Bridge was completed by the state in 1978 and is part of the bypass highway around the edge of the city. At 46 feet above the water, this bascule lift bridge was constructed high enough that most boats can pass underneath, thereby greatly reducing the number of openings and subsequent inconvenience to motorists traveling the busy highway 42/57 corridor. This bridge is the first bridge encountered by Great Lakes freighters as they navigate from Lake Michigan, through the ship canal, and on to their winter fleet berths at Fincantieri/Bay Shipbuilding in downtown Sturgeon Bay. These cargo ships definitely require the bridge to open but auto traffic stopped on the bridge is treated to the site of these giant working ships passing by.

INSIDER TIP: The first cherry trees in Door County were planted in 1896, just north of Sturgeon Bay.

What is a Fish Boil?

The Door County Fish Boil dates back to Scandinavian settlers and lumberjacks who found this a good way to prepare a tasty meal of nature's bounty.

The process: Take white fish filets – so fresh that it was probably caught that morning! – combine them with potatoes and onions. Throw it all in a pot and boil it over an open fire.

You'll want to have your camera ready for the final "boil over." The "whooshing" flames are a big part of the festive ritual of preparing a fish boil and signal that your scrumptious meal is about ready.

When the fish boil is done, it's served up with plenty of melted butter, your favorite beverage and maybe a slab of Door County Cherry Pie.

Now – that's good eating!

Michael Marit- DC Mushrooms

We love to bring our freshly harvested shiitake mushrooms to the farmers market because it gives us an opportunity to connect with the community in ways that wouldn't otherwise be possible. We believe that a strong local food system creates a healthier, stronger, and more resilient community. We also believe it's our duty as farmers to be transparent to our customers to show them how we grow our mushrooms. We look forward to connecting more people to nature as they become more aware of where their food comes from. We hope to see YOU at the market this year!

Sturgeon Bay Ship Canal Lighthouse

Luke Collins

Situated on the southern side of the Sturgeon Bay Ship Canal, this lighthouse was established in 1899 to complement the North Pierhead Light. It features a unique white and red design and stands as a testament to the area's rich maritime history. Although not open to the public, the lighthouse can be viewed from various vantage points along the canal, providing a scenic backdrop for those exploring the area.

DID YOU KNOW? The Sturgeon Bay Ship Canal was built to allow ships to travel through the Door Peninsula instead of using the dangerous Death's Door Passage.

Built in 1883, Sherwood Point Lighthouse is perched on the western tip of Sturgeon Bay. This lighthouse is unique as it was the last manned lighthouse on the Great Lakes, remaining staffed until 1983. The lighthouse grounds are open to the public during the annual Lighthouse Festival, and the structure itself serves as a popular subject for photographers. Its scenic location offers panoramic views of the bay and a glimpse into the past maritime life.

Sherwood Point Lighthouse

Luke Collins

DID YOU KNOW? The Sherwood Point Lighthouse is the only lighthouse in Door County made of red brick, while other lighthouses in the area use limestone brick. Limestone and red brick differ in composition, durability, and cost.

Fishing in Sturgeon Bay: A 2025 Guide

Fishing Seasons

Spring (March-May): Ideal for catching walleye and northern pike.

Summer (June-August): Best time for smallmouth bass and perch.

Fall (September-November): Great for trout and salmon fishing.

Winter (December-February): Ice fishing for perch and northern pike is popular.

Because of our location, Sturgeon Bay can offer anglers opportunities unequaled by any other area. Located on the Door Peninsula, between both Green Bay and Lake Michigan, Sturgeon Bay offers spectacular warm- and cool-water fishing.

You can travel to the salmon and trout waters of the lake and to the warmer waters of Green Bay and Sturgeon Bay. These waters are teeming with perch, small-mouth bass, northern pike, walleye and even musky! No other fishing area can offer such a multispecies array of fish within such close proximity. It is possible to fish for trout and salmon in the morning, and then for perch, pike or bass in the afternoon without even leaving your boat.

The fishing season never closes in Sturgeon Bay. Even though several species have closed seasons, there is always something to fish for. From ice fishing to open-water fishing, Sturgeon Bay is an angler's paradise.

Here's everything you need to know to make the most of your fishing adventure in Sturgeon Bay:

Top Fishing Spots

Lake Michigan

Bay of Green Bay

Sturgeon Bay Ship Canal: Renowned for its rich variety of fish, including walleye, smallmouth bass and northern pike.

Potawatomi State Park: Offers excellent shore fishing opportunities and scenic views.

Sawyer Harbor: A great spot for catching perch and bluegill, perfect for family outings.

To fish in Sturgeon Bay, you'll need a valid Wisconsin fishing license, which can be purchased online or at local bait shops and sporting goods stores.

Guided Fishing Tours

For those new to the area or looking to enhance their fishing experience, guided tours are available. Experienced local guides provide all the necessary equipment and expertise to help you reel in the big ones.

Fishing Events/Tournaments

STURGEON BAY OPEN BASS TOURNAMENT:

Held this year on May 16 & 17, this annual catch and release fishing event attracts anglers from all over the country.

Tips for a Successful Fishing Trip

Early Morning and Late Evening: These times are typically the most productive for fishing.

Check Local Regulations: Be sure to stay updated on the latest fishing regulations and catch limits.

Pack Essentials: Bring sunscreen, plenty of water, and appropriate gear for a comfortable and successful fishing trip.

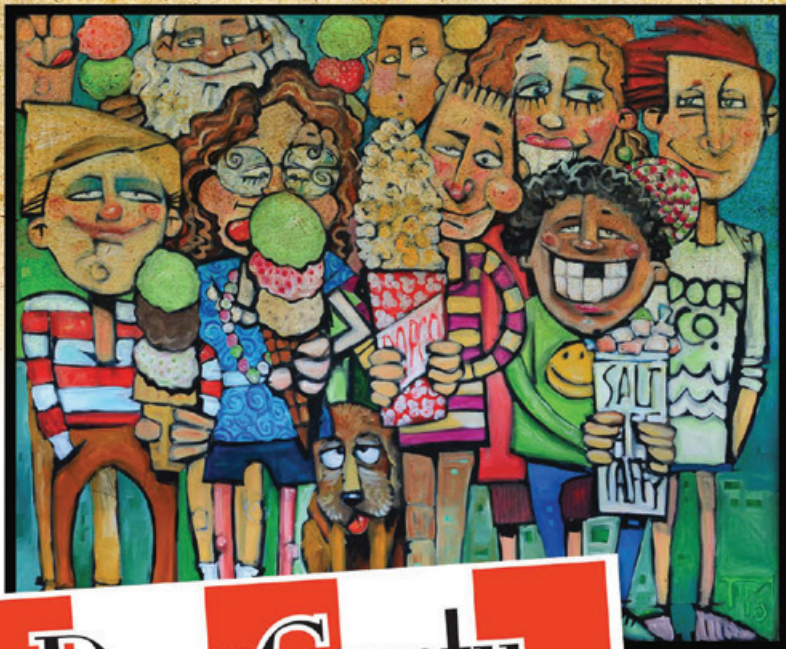

Conservation and Respect for Nature

Sturgeon Bay is committed to preserving its natural beauty and aquatic life. Please practice catch and release when appropriate, dispose of trash properly, and respect wildlife habitats.

Come explore the abundant waters of Sturgeon Bay and make unforgettable fishing memories. Whether you're a seasoned angler or a beginner, Sturgeon Bay offers an exceptional fishing experience for everyone.

Celebrating 25 Years of Public Street Art

Get ready, Sturgeon Bay - it's time to celebrate 25 years of incredible street art! For the past quarter-century, Destination Sturgeon Bay's public art projects have transformed our streets into an ever-changing canvas of creativity, drawing visitors and locals alike to experience the unique spirit of our community.

While we'll deeply miss last year's Bass Around the Bay sculptures, which captured the essence of our waterside charm and brought so much joy and admiration, we're gearing up for something even more spectacular to mark this special anniversary.

For our 25th anniversary project, we're taking inspiration from the heart of Sturgeon Bay—our maritime heritage—with Sails! These stunning sculptures will showcase the elegant beauty of sailboats and honor the deep connection between our community and the waters that surround us. Each sail will be transformed into a work of art by talented artists, celebrating both creativity and the timeless allure of sailing.

This year's project isn't just about celebrating art—it's a celebration of 25 years of community pride, innovation and artistic expression that have made Sturgeon Bay's street art a cherished tradition. Whether you're a long-time resident or a first-time visitor, you won't want to miss this stunning collection as it sets sail throughout the city.

Join us in making this milestone year unforgettable! Explore the art, celebrate the creativity and help us honor 25 years of turning Sturgeon Bay's streets into a vibrant gallery. Sail into Sturgeon Bay with inspiring and unforgettable public street art!

“ I have been all over the world and this is the most beautiful small museum I've ever seen. ”
